

The Peacock and The Crane

Once upon a time, there was a peacock who had very beautiful feathers and was entirely full with pride. One day, he happened to meet a crane and spread his wide, shiny, grand and colourful tail under the sun for impressing him.

The peacock said proudly to the crane, "Look here, how gorgeous is my Wings. What do you have to compare by it? I am beautified in all seven colours and glory of rainbow, where as your feathers are dusty, dull and grey!"

Instead of answering, the crane spread his wide wings, flew up in the sky, and then replied, "If you can, follow me! But the peacock stood wherever he was, among the banyan birds. However, the crane roared in far freedom of the blue sky.

Therefore, the crane showed the reality to the peacock that useful is more important than ornamental. The peacock got extremely ashamed and folded up his wings.

Moral

This interesting story has two very meaningful morals, which are:

1. Useful is much more important and valuable than ornamental.
2. Never find fault in others.

Every Time is Story Time

By story, we can grow our creativity of mind because every story has a moral, and if we learn more we can learn new and good things. That is why you tell these all Stories to your children and tell them their Morals because, by morals, children can learn new and unique things. You can learn morals by reading it loudly. So, why are you waiting for? Tell The Story of The Peacock and The Crane to your child and tell him the Moral of this Story.